THE GOODNESS OF READY MEALS

At the turn of the millennium, we, the children, stepped in: My brother Fabio and I joined our parents and considered how to revitalize the family business, focusing on ready-made meals and classic rotisserie preparations. First and foremost, arancini.

My wife is Sicilian, and I learned to love that region and its cuisine during my military service, so it was natural to include arancini on our menu. We combined the best of two regions with an extraordinary heritage of flavor: the original Sicilian recipe and Piedmontese rice.

So we created our own food laboratory, where we produce arancini and other gastronomic preparations without preservatives, just like good homemade food.

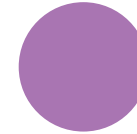

With the same spirit that my father and mother had in the 1970s when they opened their market stall, carrying only quality products whose origins they were certain of.

FAMILY TASTE

"What good thing can I give you, ma'am?"

"One of those chickens you raise, Roberto."

Thus begins our story, a story of taste that spans two generations.

It all began with my father, Roberto, who started working in a butcher shop in the 1970s. After gaining experience, he decided to set up his own business and opened his own business in Turin's local market. Always at his side at the counter was my mother, Cristina.

They began to be appreciated by a clientele who recognized the value of good things, such as the chickens and rabbits that my parents raised in the yard.
